Students regularly misplace small everyday items, such as keys, keycards, or earphones. While organizational methods like keychains are helpful, they don't work well for many items. As a result, students may have to pay for replacements, struggle to stay organized and efficient in their daily routines.